

15 THE STORY of the final robbery appeared in the newspapers and on TV the next day. Nowak bought a newspaper on his way to the police station. Just after he got to his office, Pawluk came in.

“Have you seen the newspapers?” he asked.

“Yes,” said Nowak, “I bought one on the way here.”

“It’s interesting what they write. There were a few lines about the robbery yesterday. But most of it was about Maciej Fryc. They seem fascinated by him.”

“Are you surprised?”

“Not really. I have to say, they are quite sympathetic. It’s hard to imagine what his life is like. It must be difficult.”

That weekend, the weather changed completely. On Sunday evening, the temperature increased by fifteen degrees and the mountains of snow began to melt. As Nowak drove to work, he was thinking about the robberies. He couldn’t believe that it was only a week ago that the snow had begun to fall and the first bank robbery happened. When he got to the police station the next morning, he went to Pawluk’s office.

“There’s a lot of water outside from the melting snow. I preferred it when it was colder. I’ve just been to the kiosk to get a couple of magazines and my trousers are soaking wet.” Nowak said.

“Have you started reading magazines?” Pawluk asked.

“No. But there’s a good reason this week.”

Nowak took the magazines from his coat pocket. Maciej Fryc was on the front cover of both. Day by day, the media interest in him continued. By the end of the week, three news channels had called Nowak asking him for interviews. Each time, he gave the job to Pawluk, suggesting it might help his career.

Two weeks after Maciej Fryc’s arrest, a popular theatre actor contacted his lawyer. He had read all of the stories in the media, he told her, and he wanted to pay for Maciej to complete his treatment.

Three months after the end of the treatment, the trial of the Fryc brothers began. It was August, and Nowak and Pawluk drove to the courtroom in short-sleeved shirts and ties.

“It seems a long time since the robberies,” said Pawluk.
